DEPARTMENT OF LABOR AND INDUSTRIES

FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL

Directory of Labor Organizations in Massachusetts, 1942

With Statistics of Membership, 1938-1942

INTRODUCTION

The material here presented constitutes the Forty-First Annual Directory of Labor Organizations in Massachusetts, the first directory of this character having been published in August, 1902.¹ The term "Labor organization", as used in this directory, is a group of employees or wage-earners organized for the purpose of improving their status through negotiations with employers and, to this end, is usually a party to either a written or verbal agreement concerning wages and conditions of employment.

Since the 1941 Directory was issued, many new unions have been organized, some have changed their affiliations, and others have become inactive or disbanded.² The net result, with respect to local labor unions, was a gain of 212 in number, due largely to the organization of entire plants.

This edition consists of four divisions, as follows:

I. "National and International Organizations" having one or more affiliated local unions in the United States (pages 3-10).

II. "Delegate Organizations" consisting of organizations composed of delegates from local unions whose members are in trades or industries of a like character within a definite district, or of delegates from local unions in the same locality, not necessarily in similar trades (pages 11-20).

III. "Local Labor Unions" composed of wage-earners in a single locality, directly associated in what may be termed the "unit body" of organization (pages 21-106).

IV. "Statistics of Labor Organizations" showing number and membership of local unions as of January 15, 1942, with data for four prior years (pages 107-112).

At the beginning of each year a general canvass is made for the data which appear in this directory. Each national and international labor organization known to be in existence in the United States (See Section I) is requested to furnish the Department with the name and address of its corresponding official and a list of any Massachusetts locals affiliated, together with the names and addresses of certain officials of such unions. From the delegate type of organizations in Massachusetts (See Section II) somewhat similar data are secured. Each local unit known to be in existence, whether or not chartered by a parent body, is canvassed and detailed information is secured as to the time and place of meeting, the names and addresses of corresponding and other officials, and other relevant data (See Section III). These same unions also report the membership of their organizations (See Section IV). So-called "plant unions" functioning independently, and not chartered by any labor organization, are not required to report their existence to any agency, and there may be some of these concerning which this Department has no record.

¹ An edition of this directory has been published each year since 1902, except in 1903, in which year the directory for 1902 was reprinted.

² Total number of organizations listed in this issue is 2,311, of which number 202 are national and international organizations. 190 are delegate organizations, and 1,919 are local labor unions.

Officials of those organizations from whom no report was received in response to the original request were visited by the statistical investigators of the Division, and the necessary data were secured. There were also ascertained, from various sources, facts with reference to the forming of new unions and the disbanding of those formerly active. At the time of going to press, there were incorporated in this issue such changes as had come to the attention of the Department since the original canvass was made. Subsequent changes cannot, of course, be made in this report but are on record where known. Officials of organizations listed herein are urged to advise the Department of any such changes as they occur. The Department makes every effort to issue the directory as early in the year as possible, as much of its usefulness depends upon the promptness of its issue. In this endeavor we have had the cordial co-operation of labor officials throughout the State.

II. DELEGATE ORGANIZATIONS

In this section appear the names of organizations in Massachusetts composed of delegates from local labor unions within a particular trade or group of trades, or a definite district. For convenience, the organizations comprising major industries or trades have been separately grouped.

The following facts are given for each organization: name; business office or headquarters, and telephone number; names and addresses of the president, chairman, secretary (or other authorized correspondent); and business agent (if any). When no address is given for an official named, he may be addressed at the business office or the place of meeting.

III. LOCAL LABOR UNIONS

The names of the local unions appear in this section, grouped for ready reference by trade and occupational headings, under the respective municipalities in which their headquarters are located.

The following facts are given for each union; name and charter number (and brief identifying description where necessary); time and place of meeting, if held regularly each week or month at a given place; and name and address of secretary, business agent, or other authorized correspondent. Union meetings are usually held, on week days, about 7.30 or 8.00 P. M., and on Sundays, about 2.00 P. M. Where meetings are scheduled at other than such times, the hours are specified.

Nearly all of the local unions are affiliated with national or international bodies. Designations of local unions follow closely the names of parent bodies as given in Section I.

"Federal Labor Unions" are those chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor, and should not be confused with unions of federal or government employees.

IV. STATISTICS OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS, 1938-1942.

Introductory

Statistical data are here presented having reference to the number and membership of labor organizations which were in existence in Massachusetts as of January 15, 1942, with comparable data for each of four prior years.¹ The questionnaire sent each January for "Directory" purposes includes an inquiry calling for the number of members of each local organization, by sex. For the most part, the information requested was secured by mail but where questionnaires were not returned, statistical investigators of the Department obtained the necessary facts from some official source.

Details with respect to individual unions are held strictly confidential and are used only in the compilation of totals. Accordingly, in order not to disclose the membership of any organization reporting, the data presented in no case relate to less than five organizations in any group.

Statistics of labor organizations in Massachusetts were collected annually, beginning with the year 1908, by the former Bureau of Labor Statistics, and since 1920 by the Division of Statistics of the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries. Summaries of returns have been preserved in the files of the Division. The tabulations do not include unions of letter carriers, post office clerks, railway mail clerks, or others in the postal service.

1. Comparison by Industries and Trades.

It is now the general policy of both the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organization to admit all workers in a plant to a single organization, commonly known as a "plant" or "shop" type of Union, without regard to the class of work performed by them but in which different crafts are represented in the governing body. The American Federation of Labor, however, continues to organize members of a single craft or trade, or employees in closely related occupations, in conformity with its earlier policies, through its affiliated national bodies organized on this basis.

The number of local unions in Massachusetts in January, 1942, was 1,695 (excluding the unions of letter carriers, etc., as previously mentioned). This figure of 1,695 showed a net gain of 192 over the number in existence in January, 1941 (1,503). During the course of the year many unions became inactive or dissolved, but a great many more were formed, some to replace those no longer in existence. In the tabulation of membership, those unions only were considered which were fully organized, whether chartered by national bodies or operating independently.

The membership of local unions varied greatly during the five-year period under discussion. The least number of members during this period was 295,866, in 1939, which was less by 1,172 than the membership in 1938 (297,038). There was a gain of 23,808 in the 1940 membership, a further gain of 39,000 in the 1941 membership, and an increase of 104,341 members in 1942 over 1941. The 1942 total membership of 463,015 comprised 364,715 male members and 98,300 female members. The maximum membership previous to 1942 was 368,486, in 1920, comprising 302,105 males and 66,381 females. In 1942 combined membership exceeded the previous peak by 94,529, the male membership exceeded the previous peak by 62,610, and the female membership, by 31,919.

Every endeavor has been made to classify each local organization with that industry or group of trades with which its members are most closely allied or identified. Based on the number of local unions, the leading organized groups in 1942 were as follows: building trades, 308; transportation, 234; metal and machinery trades, 131; textile industry, 105; printing and allied trades, 74; and boot and shoe industry, 56. There were 787 unions in various other industrial and trade groups in 1942, compared with 647 in 1941, indicating widespread organization activities, not confined to major industries.

Based on membership of local unions therein, the leading groups in 1942 were as follows: metal and machinery trades, 68,310; textile industry, 60,011; building trades, 38,462; transportation, 32,851; boot and shoe industry, 32,097; and printing and allied trades, 10,216. The miscellaneous unions had a total membership of 221,068.

Upon reference to the tabulations, it will be observed that there were a number of important increases in the membership of major groups during the course of the year. The metal and machinery trades showed the greatest gain (29,501) over 1941 membership, due largely to further unionization of those employed in electrical machinery and allied establishments, and of those in other types of metal and machinery establishments, many on defense or related work. The textile industry showed the next important gain (9,445 members).

2. Distribution by Occupational Groups

In Table 2 data are presented for each of the five years 1938-1942, inclusive, for each occupational group comprising at least 500 members in January, 1942. The prevalence of "mixed" unions in the boot and shoe industry and the textile industry makes it impossible to present any data on an occupational basis for these two groups, and also makes it difficult to present a truly representative occupational showing for other groups.

There were 19 occupational groups comprising at least 5,000 members in 1942, and of these, the following nine had a membership of over 10,000: electrical machinery, apparatus, and supplies, 43,305; garment workers, 30,699; teamsters, chauffeurs, etc., 27,807; marine and shipbuilding workers, 18,237; carpenters, 13,670; rubber workers, 12,993; government employees, 12,100; municipal and state employees, 12,033; and telephone operators and workers, 11,285. The marine and shipbuilding workers showed the greatest increase in 1942 over 1941 (15,621 members). The membership of garment workers unions showed the next greatest increase (10,382), and the telephone operators and workers, the third greatest (7,245). There were ten groups having a membership of between 5,000 and 10,000, and nine other groups having a membership of between 2,500 and 5,000.

¹ Prior to 1939 Longshoremen were included under Freight Handlers and Clerks, in Transportation.

² Data for earlier years cannot be shown without disclosing the membership of the individual organizations. Membership of unions in these groups is therefore included in the "All other" groups in those years.

3. Distribution of Local Unions by Municipalities

The principal field of activity of that type of labor organization known as a "local" or "labor union" is the city or town in which a large majority of its members find employment, and in which the headquarters or meeting place of the union is located. A union not of the "plant" type is frequently granted jurisdiction over one or more adjacent cities and towns. This is especially true of building trades unions. The jurisdiction of certain types of railroad unions oftentimes extends over an entire system, and their membership thus includes some from distant points on the system represented. In the city of Boston, the total membership of organizations classified thereunder usually is much greater than the number of organized wage-earners who reside there but a majority of whom are employed in Boston or near by. The availability of halls and meeting places is also a factor.

Data are presented in Table 3 showing the number and membership of local unions in Massachusetts in each of the years 1938-1942, inclusive, classified by municipalities in which there were five or more unions and which had a membership of 500 or more in 1942.

Boston far outranked the other 44 municipalities listed, with respect to the number of local unions and their membership, principally for reasons given above. Of the 1,695 unions in Massachusetts, 421, or 24.8 per cent, had their headquarters in Boston. Their aggregate membership was 151,762, or 32.8 per cent of the total membership (463,015) of all local unions in the state in 1942. In 17 municipalities (including Boston) the number of organized wage-earners exceeded 5,000, and the combined membership of these 17 municipalities was 377,278, or 81.5 per cent of the aggregate membership of the entire state. The nine municipalities (in addition to Boston) in which the unions had a membership of more than 10,000, were: Springfield, 28,034; Lynn, 25,950; Fall River, 22,680; New Bedford, 20,851; Quincy, 19,702; Brockton, 17,395; Lawrence, 16,097; Worcester, 15,448, and Haverhill, 11,109. In each of these cities there are certain industries which predominate, and which are well organized.

² Data for earlier years are not given if the totals are under 500, or if totals would disclose the membership of individual organizations. The number and membership of unions in these cities in earlier years are included in the "All others" groups.
